Cranks?

We are all cranky about something. Some of us know it and some don't. A customer told us the other day we were on the one price idea. He wanted us to sell him our all wool black square cut chevot four-fifty suit for even four. Of course we couldn't do it, but to please him we picked up the same price suit in a blue and asked him six for it—he offered five-fifty for it—we took him up and he was delighted. After getting his five-fifty we told him we had robbed him of a dollar and unwrapped the suit and showed him the mark in plain figures on the ticket $4.50 and then handed him back his dollar.

Now which way had you rather trade? we asked. HE saw the point and we believe you do too.

CREAM OF NEWS.

IF IT IS NEW AND TRUE THIS COLUMN HAS IT.

Fatal Wreck—Political Pickings—Hunters Leave—Big Baptisms—Rite Broken—Terrific Mistake—Arrest.

Cotton Crop Estimate.

The estimate of the cotton crop made by Latham, Alexander & Co., places the crop at 6,435,000 bales, and was based upon estimates given in 2,632 letters received from reliable correspondents, banks, bankers, cotton commission men, merchants, brokers, proprietors of public gins, railroad officials and planters, covering every cotton-growing county in the south.

In commenting upon the crop conditions the letter of Latham, Alexander & Co., says:

"In addition to the injury the crop had previously suffered, the excessive heat during the latter part of August and month of September caused the plant to mature prematurely, to shed its fruit, dry up and lose the top crop.

By reason of the long continued dry weather picking is farther advanced than ever before known—in some sections already entirely over and the crop has been marketed with unusual rapidity. Few correspondents report any disposition on the part of planters to hold back their cotton.

The Drink Proved Fatal.

Geo. C. Pritchett, of Madisonville, for years a well known and popular city drummer for Dixie & Lord, Nashville, died at his home Friday under singular circumstances. Upon awakening that morning Mr. Pritchett took a drink from a bottle which he supposed contained whisky, but which in reality was filled with a preparation of cyanide, rosewater and carbolic acid which had been used by some of his family for chapped lips and hands. Mr. Pritchett was seized with violent pains and soon lost consciousness. Death ensued before a physician could arrive in response to a call.

Cadiz Commission.

W. H. Hancock was elected police judge of Cadiz, by 12 votes over J. E. Edwards. The Progressive ticket for councilmen won over the Citizens ticket, except in one instance. H. H. Garton, the Republican member, dropping 6 or 8 votes behind and letting C. H. Hawkins in from the Citizens' ticket. The councilmen elected were W. C. White, W. N. Brandon, M. S. Thompson, B. F. Goodwin, L. Lindsay and C. H. Hawkins.

Miss Mattie Mason Injured.

For several weeks Miss Mattie Mason, a young lady of the Laytonville neighborhood, has been sick and one morning last week she attempted to walk across the floor, became dizzy and fell across the foot board of her bed breaking several ribs. The injury has caused her much suffering, but at last accounts she was slowly improving.

Another One Captured.

The fourth arrest for complicity in the assassination of Howlett Howton, in Caldwell, has been made. W. M. Gibbons was caught in Hopkins county and is now in jail at Princeton. He was indicted along with about a dozen others at the last term of court.

A New Cause Inaugurated.

Jas. Majors, of Henderson, was brought to the asylum last Thursday. During the encampment of State Guards last summer at Henderson, Majors was struck on the head with a club by a negro and it is thought that the blow caused his insanity.

Wanted in Clarksville.

Chief Fritz captured Jim Carney, a Clarksville negro, Friday and lodged him in jail to await Tennessee officers. Carney is charged with "holding up" a man about two months ago, near Clarksville, and relieving him of considerable cash.

A Very Successful Meeting.

The protracted meeting which had been in progress at Rich Station for two weeks, closed Friday night. Rev. Fowler conducted the meeting and large crowds were on hand at every service. A large number of persons united with the church, all of whom were baptized Sunday.

Burglars Make a Mistake.

Friday night burglars entered the house of Jim Henry Quaker, a negro barber, and carried off a number of valuable articles. The thieves entered the building by prizing open a window.

The One Who Disappeared.

Ed Clifpatrick, the negro boy who killed Jeff Harris with a stick at Barney's, was acquitted at the examination.

PASS THE PIE.

A List of The Fat Places to Be Given Out

Below will be found a list of the more important places that will be turned over to the incoming Republicans:

The Governor will appoint a private secretary, salary $1,200; State Inspector and Examiner, salary $3,000; Adjutant General, salary $2,000; Assistant Adjutant General, salary $1,200; Arsenal Keeper, salary $800; Inspector of Mines, salary $1,800, and $800 as Curator of the Geological Survey; Assistant Inspector of Mines, salary $1,200. The members of the State Board of Equalization, whose pay shall be $5 per day for such time as the board is in session. Superintendent of Feeble-minded Institute at Frankfort, salary $2,000. Three asylum superintendents, salaries $2,000; nine assistant physicians and three stewards, salaries ranging from $1,250 to $850, board at State expenses in asylums.

The Secretary of State will have the appointment of the Assistant Secretary of State, whose appointments must be confirmed by the Governor, salary $1,800; two clerks in the Cordeaux, salaries ranging from $1,250 to $850, board at State expenses in asylums.

The Assistant Auditor, salary $2,000; Chief Clerk, salary $1,800; nine clerks, salaries $1,500, and one clerk, salary $1,300. The Treasurer will have the naming of his assistant, whose salary will be $1,200.

The Commissioner of Agriculture will appoint one clerk, salary $1,200, and a Grain Inspector and Grain Weigher Inspector at Louisville, salaries $2,000 each, with Commission, usually aggregating $3,000 and $4,000; weigher fees worth $1,500. The Superintendent of Public Instruction will appoint three clerks, salaries $1,500, $1,000 and $800 respectively. Register of Lands will name two clerks, whose salaries will be $1,200, and one clerk, whose salary will be $1,000.

The Sinking Fund Commissioners, composed of the Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor, Treasurer and Attorney General, elect two permanent Wardens, salaries $2,000, two Deputy Wardens, salaries $1,200, one Chaplain, salary $1,200, two physicians, salaries $1,000 and forty-four guards, $750 each, and a number of minor employees. The Railroad Commissioners will select one clerk, salary $1,200.

The Superintendents of the asylums will each have the appointment of a Receiver, whose salary is fixed by the Board of Commissioners. It is generally $600 and board. Each Superintendent also appoints a Matron, a Druggist, 30 to 60 attendants, independent practical engineers, men and other employees, whose wages are from $40 to $100 a month and subject to change by the Boards.

It is supposed that Gov. Bradley will appoint a full board of Commissioners here who retire in 1896 are Messrs. H. C. Gant, T. H. Carlos and E. B. Bassett. As there is no salary attached to these places it is supposed that Gov. Bradley will appoint negroes to them. In that event the white Commissioners would all resign and he would then have an opportunity to appoint a full board of Republicans who could increase salaries to suit the demands of the hungry horde to be turned into them.

The Superintendent, Assistant Physicians and Steward all have about 18 months longer to serve under their Commissions, but they are subject to removal at any time. The Governor will probably want their places at once to fulfill ante-election promises.

Dr. Letcher, of Henderson, is already tipped for Dr. Stone's place.

Bridge Company Pay Taxes.

A check for $98,620 taxes on the Henderson bridge for the years 1893, 94, 95 and 96 arrived yesterday and was placed in the city treasury. This will give the new council a handsome sum with which to start in business. Out of this sum, however, is to be deducted $6,950 which under the law goes to City Attorney Ron. Jas. F. Clay—Henderson Journal.

Dr. Sargent Doesn't Want It.

Dr. Andrew Sargent says the report that he would apply for superintendent of the Western Asylum is incorrect. He is one Republican who does not care for any office. He will devote himself to his practice and let others scramble for the places at Gov. Bradley's disposal.

About Fifty Went Under.

As a result of the meeting at New Asia church, (colored) near Garrettsburg, about fifty professed religion and were baptized in Little River near Henderson, Sunday, by Rev. Bro.

THE LEGISLATURE TOO.

REPUBLICANS HAVE THE HOUSE, AND A TIE ON JOINT BALLOT.

The Majority for Bradley Only 7,500, But That is Enough—Alexander Squeezed In—Editorial Candidates.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 11.—Bradley's majority will be between 7,500 and 10,000.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 11.—All the doubts concerning the political make up of the next Legislature have been cleared away by the later returns from the uncertain districts. The Republicans control the House, but may be one vote, or may be two, short of a majority on joint ballot. However this last does not matter, for they will turn out enough House members to make room for enough Republican constituents to elect a United States Senator on joint ballot.

The make-up of the next General Assembly will be as follows:

House	Dem.	Rep.	Pop.
Senate	46	36	2
Joint	82	68	2

These figures are based on the victory of Chambers over Kennedy in Kenton, which is now conceded, although the official count has not been made.

Of the two Populists one is a Democrat and the other is supposed to be a Republican, in Pendleton county, there having been a deal made between the Republicans and the Populists in the legislative race.

The total vote of the county was 6,323, or 143 less than at the county election in 1890.

HUNTER IS BRADLEY'S CANDIDATE.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 11.—Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter, Congressman-elect in the third district, is a candidate for United States Senator and appears to have the backing of Gov.-elect Bradley and the powers that be. It is said he has forty Republican votes already pledged to him—enough to make certain his choice in a caucus.

The indications are that Dr. Hunter will have opposition, though, of a formidable character. Augustus E. Wilson, of this city, will certainly be a candidate, and Judge Geo. Deany, Jr., of Lexington, and Congressman D. G. Colson, of Middleboro, also announce that they will be in the race.

CLIMBING DOWN A LITTLE.

The Courier-Journal of Saturday has this: "Returns have continued to clip figures from Mr. Bradley's plurality for Governor, and at present it has none of the imposing proportions which he expected, and which at one time seemed probable. Complete returns from more of the counties heretofore reported only in part, and reports of the official count in a few counties have tended generally in favor of the Democrats. A reduction has also been made by the correction of an error in footing.

Returns are now incomplete from all but a few counties, while two counties, Jackson and Casey, have never been heard from at all. As it stands, with all returns revised and corrected to date and verified as far as possible, Mr. Bradley's plurality is 5,559. This is subject to change by the official count and the vote of the missing counties. Casey county gives ordinarily a Republican majority of about 200, and Jackson can give one of 700 if it tries.

The question of majority is one that is regarded with much interest in Hopkinsville. A number of bets were laid 5 to 1 that Bradley would not be elected by 10,000 majority. One of the largest was between a well-known ice man, and a young salesman in a clothing store. For several days the matter has been regarded as far above the limit, and some of the papers put it as high as 18,000. When the Courier-Journal came in with the news that the interest was again revived and the official figures will be awaited with much anxiety. The Post puts the majority at 10,000. This still seems to be a month ago, thirty years ago, wherever he could find a taker. It seemed so reckless and the probabilities of his winning appeared so remote a month ago, thirty years ago, a general rum among Democrats to get to him before he was brought to a stand still.

Sample of Negro Domination.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 7.—An irrepressible conflict has been raging for several days between the white pupils of the North Meridian street public school and the colored pupils of a school two blocks away. The boys ranged in age from ten to 15 years. For several weeks the whites have been robbing the school, and stealing the marbles and balls, and whenever opposed resorted to corporal punishment. Yesterday a sturdy young lad, Mattie Mason, between the two school buildings, as a play ground, and the colored pupils, according to the story of the whites, escaped down and stole their marbles and balls, and whenever opposed resorted to corporal punishment. Wreck on the L. & N.

FRANKLIN, Nov. 10.—A frightful wreck occurred on the Louisville & Nashville railroad near this place, to-night about 9:50 o'clock, resulting in the death of Fireman Love and the serious if not fatal injury of Engineer Ed. Corbett. Besides quite a number of people were considerably shaken up. From all accounts it seems that the crew of the freight were responsible for the wreck, as they were running the train very ahead of time. The freight should have taken the side track at West Harpeth instead of trying to steal in to Franklin. The crew say the fault was due to Engineer Hayes' watch being wrong.

Chas. A. Love, the dead fireman, was about 30 years of age. It is said he lived on West Church street, in Nashville. He was a single man.

The City Vote Official.

The official vote in the councilmen's race was: First ward, R. H. Holland (Dem.) 89, H. M. Anderson (Rep.) 42; Second, J. D. Ware (Dem.) 84, F. L. Ellis (Rep.) 38; Third, D. R. Perry (Dem.) 107, R. A. Peck (Rep.) 56; Fourth, G. D. Dalton (Dem.) 73, John Dineen (Rep.) 28; Fifth, A. H. Anderson (Rep.) 89, B. S. Wood 1; Sixth, E. M. Plack (Dem.) 108, Geo. C. Long 1; Seventh, W. H. TWO IN THE DESERT.

RAGGED itself

westward across the plains of

the train, from a vantage

point in the sky, looked like a small, horse-hair

snake crawling over

the earth's surface.

The earth—almost the air—was white with the heat of the summer

sun. All was vastness, immensity, al-

lence, loneliness; above, the flawless

blue of the sky, seemed to be a blanket of reddish yellow, unmitigated by the streak of shivering light, the mocking water mirage at the base of the mountain range hundreds of miles away. Encompassed within that horizon there was no thing of life except with that desultory moving train.

Stocked in the emigrant or third-class

car of the train was a crowd of tired, miserable and dirty people. They looked out listlessly at the passing landscape, or stupidly at each other,

or twisted themselves into all sorts of uncomfortable positions on the hard woolen seats in vain efforts to secure a little sleep. Perhaps the most unprepossessing of them all was a dark-featured, roughly-dressed man. Beside him was a very little girl in a blue dress. His lowering, repellent face had a scowl upon it which suggested the convict or the desperado, but he was neither. The scowl and the unconscious sneer about his ugly mouth

were born simply of a long and thoroughly fruitless struggle with misfortune.

Although pretty, it was easily to be seen that the little girl was his child.

She was a momentous factor in a mighty problem to the man whose arm

was about her and whose knitted brows

and troubled face showed how hard it was he studied it. A crazy letter had come to him across the continent, and he had left the tenements of New York to try and reach the golden land of California. He had started with hardly sufficient money to take himself and child more than half the distance, but he had a confused sort of an idea that he would in some way reach his destination. Better it was at all events,

than to remain in the noisome Hester street den, where, without work, or the prospect of any, his little sum of money was soon gone.

The station to which his scanty

purse had enabled him to buy a ticket

for himself and child had been passed

hundreds of times, and he was wondering

how soon the conductor of the train

would discover the shameful imposition he was practicing upon the railway company. He had not much longer to wait, for presently the au-thousand miles of the dreary waste of barren plains and the burning sun overhead.

In the rear of the sentry box its protecting roof had cast a little shade, and here the man sat down upon the ground with his child still in his arms.

Strange things, for him, came to his eyes—tears. The little one looked up at him in a puzzled way, and he hastily brushed his hand across his face and left a broad smudge of railway soot upon his cheek. She clapped her hands and laughed with glee at his funny face.

Then thirst came to them—that awful, torturing, unreasoning thirst which the desert alone can give. The child cried for water, and the father left her in the scanty shade and stepped out into the blazing sun. Neither in the sky nor in the parched ground was there a drop of moisture, and he knew

it. He returned and tried to comfort her, and then he sat down again, buried his face in his hands and tried to think. The evening was coming on when he rose to his feet with a new resolve.

Away far off in the west a thin, almost imperceptible streak of smoke told him that the east-bound train was approaching. Near the track he found a dirty shred of a flag hanging to a stick, and he placed it in the socket of the upright post standing in front of the house. Nervously his fingers fumbled in his pockets until he produced the stump of a lead pencil.

Picking up a piece of pasteboard, he wrote upon it in great, rough letters:

"SOME ONE TAKE THIS CHILD."

SHE HAS NO PARENTS.

With a string he placed the placard around the neck of the little girl. This done he took her in his arms, kissed her again and again, pointed to the smoke that was becoming blacker and longer, and told her that water was coming. When the rails began to sing of the approach of the coming train, he placed her near the track, and then ran and hid himself behind the dug-out. From his hiding place he looked out and agely watched the child, while the rattle and clatter and thunder of the train grew louder in his ears. On it came with a rush and a roar, and flew past the station in a gale of wind and noise. The man's heart died within him, and then it beat wildly again.

The train had stopped several hundred yards past the station, and was coming back to the sentry box. The engineer had seen the tattered flag.

As the long train rolled slowly backward, curious and inquiring heads protruded from the car windows. The gold-embazoned conductor stepped off and looked about him in wonder. Not for several moments did he discover the child. Immediately there was a crowd about it and the placard was passed from hand to hand. A white-jaacketed porter came out of a Pullman car and placed a wooden step on the ground before it. He was followed by a lady in black, who descended from the car and joined the throng. A pair

FORBES & BRO.

MR. WATSON'S LATCHING.

Now that all of the mischief has been done, Mr. Watson denies his responsibility for the remarkable course the Courier-Journal pursued in the late campaign. He says, "With the beginning of the year it was formally and expressly announced in these columns that he would not appear either in the State convention, or in the succeeding campaign; and as a matter of fact he has not been in the State for any consecutive period during the year." So it was announced, but we have long since learned that the Courier-Journal reserves the right to change its mind on very short notice and often with no notice at all. Despite his implied denial, Mr. Watson did appear in the campaign in more than one carefully prepared leader, not one of which had for its object the good of the Democratic party. The particular onslaught upon the "rural press," that provoked the remarks that Mr. Watson is pleased to characterize as "resentful," was especially bitter, unkind and unworthy of the great journalist the younger members of the press have all delighted to love and respect. Descending from the high plane he usually occupies, Mr. Watson dipped his pen in gall and called names, hurled epithets and heaped abuse upon the heads of the "jabberwocks" and "silver lunatics" who are still believers in the seven great principles of bimetalism Mr. Watson advocated in his paper only a few years ago. The great editor did not "refuse to quarrel with his friends" as he claims. He deserted his friends in the face of the enemy. He forsook the principles he had taught. He denied the convictions of a life time. He quarreled with and abused all who refused to face about with him on the currency question. He helped with his own pen to divide his party, and his own counsels led it to defeat. These are not idle charges, but facts known of all men. The Courier-Journal has been the leader and mouth-piece of the Democratic party in Kentucky for a generation. Its great editor, as he himself says, has represented his State in every national convention twenty-five years. No man in Kentucky has ever been so honored. Yet in the face of all this confidence and unsolicited honor, Mr. Watson deliberately refused to lend a helping hand when the party that had so often trusted and exalted him was engaged in the greatest struggle of its existence. He did more than sulk in his tent. He professed friendship only to keep his party on its knees throughout the whole campaign praying to be saved from his friends. His hostility was ill concealed. The friendly and conciliatory spirit in which Mr. Watson now writes comes too late. He may well assure us that he has retired from the "personal activities of politics" in the Democratic party. He has left hardly enough of his party in Kentucky to make the game of politics worth his attention. His "itching" is not alone in being on the outside. The party of which the Courier-Journal has been the "official organ," so to speak, loved and trusted, is in the same condition. Alas! the trip to Europe has been too long delayed.

Gov. Brown has appointed Jas. N. Saunders, of Stanford, to the vacancy on the Railroad Commission caused by the resignation of Senator C. C. McChord. The term expires Jan. 1, 1896. Mr. Saunders was a member of the last legislature from Washington county.

With Webster county to hear from, the vote of the second district: Brady 11,745; Hardin 11,599; Pettit 3,546; Demaree 354. Webster gave a Republican majority, but the figures are not yet known.

The Republicans are preparing to steal three seats in the Legislature. One is in Lexington and another in Owensboro. Sometimes this sort of business works and sometimes it doesn't.

Latham, Alexander & Co. estimate the total cotton crop of the United States at 6,435,000, as compared with 9,901,000 bales for last year.

Young Deany Smith, the Democratic nominee for the Legislature in Trigg county, was beaten by his own brother, J. D. Smith, who ran on the Populist ticket. Knowing that the Republicans had made a combination with the Populists in the races for circuit judge and State senator, J. D. Smith deliberately ran as a third candidate for representative and by taking 118 votes from his brother enabled G. P. Thomas, the Republican, to win by 94 votes. If the Smith house had not been divided against itself the result might have been different.

Gov. Brown will pass into history as the ablest constitutional lawyer who has ever filled the office of Governor, with the possible exception of Gov. Knott. He has while Governor vetoed fifty-five bills passed by the Legislature, and has been sustained in every instance. He has never yet had one of his decisions set aside by the Court of Appeals. In all his decisions he has been sustained by all the courts that had to pass upon his actions. Gov. Brown will locate in Louisville to practice his profession.

The senate is Democratic by six majority and the House is Republican by the same. The Republican plan is to unseat two or three Democrats and secure a majority on joint ballot in order to elect Dr. Hunter United States senator. This is a very pretty scheme, but suppose the Democratic senate refuses to confirm any appointments until this desperate plan is abandoned. Then what?

New York, Ohio and Maryland all went Republican by majorities that are climbing up out of sight, on "sound money" platforms. Will the Courier-Journal please put one of its "field hand" editors to explaining how it happened? Did the jabberwocks do it, or was it the wobbler-jabs?

Boss New wants next year's ticket to be Harrison and Bradley, Boss Quay wants it to read Reed and Bradley and Editor Sam Roberts thinks McKinley and Bradley would be about the proper paper. Our new Governor seems to be in demand.

The Republicans gain five senators, one each in Ohio, Maryland and Kentucky after March 4, 1897, and two in Utah who will place as soon as elected. The new senate will stand, Republicans 44, Democrats 39. Populists 4, vacancy and contest in Delaware, 1.

Judge Du Ralle, elected as Judge Eastin's successor, will qualify at once and take his seat on the Appellate Bench. The Republicans now have two members of the higher court and both of them are strong free coinage advocates.

Don't give up too soon boys. In the language of the Count of Monte Cristo, "The essence of all human wisdom is contained in the two little words, Wait and Hope."

Editor Mott Ayers, of the Fulton Fultonian-Democrat, was elected police judge of his town by 99 majority. He is a bright young fellow and will fill the position with credit.

Try your hand on this one: If one letter be left out, the new Governor's name will represent the feelings of the Democrats. Which letter is it?

Gov. Bradley will be inaugurated Dec. 10, but the rest of the state officers will not qualify until January 1st.

The complete but unofficial returns give Breathitt 6,036 and Linn 5,617 votes, or a majority of 419 in the district.

Nearly fifty lives were lost by the explosion of a boiler in the Detroit Journal's press room. The property loss was $30,000.

If you are a Democrat and want to move, come to Hopkinsville.

Give 'em rope, Democrats, that's all that's necessary. They'll do the rest.

ANIMAL VISION.

Long Sight Not a Common Property Among Birds.

The Great Gray Shrike Has Sharp Eyes. Nocturnal Animals Have No Enhanced Powers When the Light is Strong.

Birds are commonly credited with an extraordinary range of vision. Circumstances lend aid to the development of the mental factors in their case. The usual distance at which terrestrial species use their eyes is limited by the ground horizon. But in the case of the soaring birds, such as vultures and eagles, the horizon, natural limit of sight, is enormously extended. Macgillivray early noted that though birds of prey have orbits of great size—the eyeball of the common buzzard being one and one-eighth inches in diameter—they do not, as a rule, soar when seeking their prey. The eagle, when hunting, flies low, just as do the sparrowhawk and the hen-harrier.

Yet the vultures and condors, birds which admittedly do soar when seeking food, have been proved to find carrion by sight. A carcass was covered with canvas and some official placed upon it. The vultures saw this, descended and ate it, and then sat on the covered portion within a few inches of a putrid carcass. When a hole was made in the covering they saw and attacked the food below. But the rapid congregation of vultures from a distance to a carcass is probably due to their watching their neighbors, each of which is surveying a limited area. Charles Darwin pointed out that in a level country the height of sky commonly noticed by a mounted man is not more than fifteen degrees above the horizon; and a vulture on the wing at the height of between three thousand feet and four thousand feet would probably be two miles distant, and invisible. Those which descend rapidly, and appear to have come from beyond the range of human sight, were perhaps hovering vertically over the hunter when he killed his game.

There remains one undoubted instance in which bird vision is far keener than that of man. The great gray shrike, Lanius excubitor, is habitually used by the men who catch falcons at Valhalla to give notice of the approach of a hawk. The bird sees it far sooner than the men, and at once gives notice of its approach. This is a single instance of sight may be due to the fact that the bird in question much resembles in color the pigeons, which are the falcon's favorite food.

But long sight, says the New York Ledger, does not seem a common property of bird vision. The gannets, which catch fish at sea, descend from a considerable height, but they kill their prey on the surface of the water or near it. Nocturnal birds and animals, though able to see with little light, have no enhanced powers when the light is more powerful; and those animals which, like deer, feed by night or day indifferently, have only developed a keenness of vision from constant fear and vigilance. Hares and cattle, which have the same power of sight by night, have never increased their visual range. Dogs habitually rely on another sense, that of scent, in preference to their eyes, and will walk over a dead bird while their brain is intent on discovering its place by scent alone. Weasels, when hunting, will run up to a human being who imitates the squeak of a rabbit and peer up at him to discover where the sound comes from. The smallest of the eye limits its powers; just as the best telescope has usually the largest object glass, so the largest eye will probably be the best organ of sight, and, in the absence of any extraordinary developments in the size of the organ itself, the power of vision must, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be supposed to be proportionately limited.

MEDALS FOR BRAVE GIRLS.

Two Florida Maidens Receive Souvenirs from King Oscar.

On the night of August 7, 1894, the Norwegian ship Cathrine, Capt. Svendsen, during a fearful storm which raged on the gulf, was driven broadside on the outer beach of Santa Rosa island, one and one-half miles west of the life saving station. She was discovered when day broke by Capt. Broadbent, keeper of the station. The waves were breaking over her, and the life saver knew that she must soon go to pieces.

Under the law at that time, the life saving crews were not on duty, and only two or three of the men were at the station. There were also two visitors, Col. J. A. Davis, of Washington, special agent of the pension bureau, and Mr. C. K. O'Real, of this city, who had gone over to the island and were detained by the storm. They promptly volunteered to assist Capt. Broadbent, but it was found, says the Florida Citizen, that they were not sufficient to roll the gun down the beach to a point where a life line could be shot over to the doomed vessel.

The storm was increasing in fury, and no time was to be lost, if the crew were to be saved. At this juncture the two daughters of Capt.

Broadbent, Isabelle, aged sixteen, and Sallie, aged thirteen, volunteered to assist. With their aid the gun was rolled down the beach one and one-half miles, through a blinding storm of rain and a hurricane which nearly swept them from their feet. After several attempts the life line was shot over one of the masts of the ship and secured by the sailors. The life car was then rigged, and for hours these two brave young girls worked like men, until the last one of the eighteen men of the crew was safely landed on the beach. The ship went to pieces that night.

Capt. Svendsen and his men were filled with gratitude to their rescuers, and especially to the two young girls who had braved such a wild storm to save them. When they returned to Norway they laid the matter before their government, and King Oscar was deeply moved by the tale of heroism. He immediately gave orders to have prepared two beautiful souvenirs, to be presented to the two young girls in the name of the people of Norway. These consisted of two handsome silver lockets with heavy silver chains, appropriately inscribed, and inclosed in handsome cases, with the royal arms of Sweden and Norway embossed in gold on the covers. Each locket has on the outside in large, heavy raised letters of the two girls—"I. B." and "S. B."—and on the inside of each are two finely engraved gold tablets, on one of which appears the crown and monogram of the king and on the other "For a Noble Deed."

These souvenirs were forwarded to the Norwegian consul at this port, C. F. Boyesen, to be presented to the Misses Broadbent. They arrived, and the consul, accompanied by a number of ladies and gentlemen, including Col. Davis, who was one of the heroes of the rescue, went over to the life saving station to make the presentation.

The bent toward congenial marriages may lessen the actual probability of marriage. It is not the ardent woman, but the cold woman, for whom one marriage will do as well as another. And the college woman is not only more exacting in her standards of marriage, but under less pressure to accept what falls below her standard than the average woman, because she can better support and occupy herself alone. A matter of fact, unhappy marriages are virtually unknown among college women.—Millicent W. Shinn, in Century.

PRESIDENT TYLER'S SON.

Aged, an Invalid and Living in Great Poverty.

From the white house to a humble home, from a position of wealth to poverty, is the fate which has come to one who once held a high position, says the St. Louis Republic. This is the son of President Tyler, who for years has lived in a plain house in Georgetown. The house is a brick house, plain and neat in appearance. On the second floor is the chamber of Tyler, now an aged man, an invalid.

"It was during my father's administration," he said to a reporter, "that the famous bank bill was agitated, and it was vetoed by him, thus bringing into effect the previous law, which placed upon the shoulders of the president alone the responsibility of all the finances of the country. The white house swarmed with bankers, anxious to make agents of the government in the matter. I was my father's private secretary, a post then not recognized nor paid for by the government."

"Several bankers came down from New York and asked me to get them appointed as financial agents, and one came one day and told me that if I would secure him the place he would place a check for fifty thousand dollars in my credit in his bank. I refused, and he was astonished, saying he understood that was the way things were managed in Washington."

"I was on board the Princeton the day the big gun exploded and killed so many of the cabinet. And I remember, too, when the first message was sent by wire. Morse was a warm friend of mine. Contrary to the usual belief, the first telegraph message ever sent was not: 'What wonders God hath wrought,' but one from my father to his son, John Tyler, who was at the moment it was received in the depot of the B. & O. railroad in Baltimore. It was merely a formal greeting. This was on the day the test took place."

John Tyler is more than seventy years old, and has served in two armies, having equipped a regiment for the war with Mexico, and having served in the civil war on the southern side. He says that so far from feeling that he was a traitor, he left the executive mansion to poor, he was forced to sell his watch for thirty dollars.

HER DERELICTION.

An Episode in the Family of the President.

"Laura," said the husband of the emancipated woman, sternly. "What is it, dear?" asked the latter, in a conciliatory manner, for she saw that trouble was coming.

"Laura," he said last three weeks I have given you three letters to mail, addressed to dear papa. What have you done with them?"

"Mailed them, of course," replied the wretched woman, in a determination to bluff it out if possible.

"Laura," the husband went on, "that is not true. I received a letter from papa to-day in which he says he has not heard from me for a month, and anxiously asking if anything had happened. Now you have got those letters somewhere about your clothes. If you haven't lost them, I know just as well as I know that I am standing here that you never mailed those letters. Now go through your pockets and see if you haven't got them."

The emancipated woman commenced to look through her pockets, and soon turned out the missing letters, which she laid on the table, with the remark: "Well, I could have sworn that I put those letters in the letter-box at the corner."

The man sneered. "You can't trust a woman to do anything," he retorted. "Hereafter I'll mail my own letters, and I won't occupy your valuable time with such errands. Before you go I want ten dollars for household expenses."

The emancipated woman meekly laid the money down on the table, and went away with the remark that she would be back early in the afternoon and come home after her husband to take him to the matinee.—Harper's Bazar.

Injured by a Meteorite.

Robert Abbott, a boy of Calvary, Ireland, was about to step outside the door of his house recently when he saw in the sky, toward the west, a curious appearance, which he described as "a great shining mass, far larger than the sun." It came toward him and when quite near burst into several shining fragments, one of which appeared to be coming straight to him. He raised his hands to shield his face. Suddenly there was a noise like the firing of a gun, and cry: "O, dad! I've shot! I've shot!" The father and mother rushed out and found his hands mangled and bleeding, the tops of three fingers having been taken off the left hand, while the green of the right hand were blackened. The face was slightly grazed. This mysterious accident was believed to have been caused by an meteorite.—Kansas City Times.

PROFESSIONAL SECRETS.

An English Journalist's Opinion of How They Are Kept.

It is a Rare Thing for Any Matter of Importance Intrusted to Doctors or Lawyers to Leak Out of their Confidentiality.

Our own opinion, says the London Spectator, is that doctors and lawyers do keep professional secrets most rigidly, and that it is the rarest thing in the world for any matter of importance to leak out. It is curious, and a fact, that the maintenance of honor in the matter of confidence, strictly and regularly confided, is one of the commonest virtues. A man may be selfish, corrupt, cynical, cruel, hard, and in every way what the world calls "a pretty bad man," but it is ten to one against his not fulfilling the obligation upon him to keep secrets confided to him in the belief that he will keep them. A man may be capable of killing you to get your money, or of doing you out of your whole fortune, and yet not wantonly betray your secrets.

But though we do not believe that there is any real need for fear in regard to the disclosure of professional secrets, we cannot disguise from ourselves two facts in connection with the subject. The first is that there is a good deal of uneasiness in regard to the want of care in guarding secrets by the two great professions. The second is that the doctors and lawyers by their manner of talking do a good deal to encourage the vague and general dread to which we have alluded. The members of the two professions do not betray the confidences confided to them, but they do sometimes talk in a way which might lead timid and sensitive people to think that they do. It is not unknown to see a doctor or a lawyer in after-dinner talk dancing on the edge of the precipice of professional secrecy. For a man of strong nerves the spectacle is interesting and diverting.

One knows that the dancer is perfectly safe, and that in spite of his nearness to the abyss there is not the slightest fear of his toppling over. He seems to be telling a great deal, to be perfectly open and frank about the strange experiences which he has come across in his practice, and the odd people who have consulted him, but in reality he is telling you nothing whatever.

It is all a triumph of that slight of tongue which Lord Palmerston is said to have practised to perfection. He would talk to a man for an hour on high politics, and appear to be letting out cabinet secrets by the bagful, and the listener felt half-flattered, half-horrified, at hearing so many things which ought never to have been told outside the big drawing-room in Downing street. When, however, the talk was over, and the recipient of the ministerial confidences tried to cold blood to remember the secrets confided, he found to his astonishment that he had heard nothing which was not to be found in that morning's Times. The confidences were all a matter of manner—stage effects and nothing more. But though the experienced man of the world may realize that this professional dancing on the edge of the precipice is merely a game, and in general a perfectly safe one, the ordinary person is apt to be made extremely nervous by the display.

"He'll be over as sure as fate," is his thought, and he reflects with horror that if these things were said about his case or the curious chances in his will, he could be identified by anyone. And in one case in a thousand accidental identification may take place. Everyone remembers the venerable "chestnut" of the cardinal who told an admiring circle of ladies that the first confession he ever heard was one of murder, and how his remark was interrupted by the entry of a prince who at once proceeded to remind his old friend, the cardinal: "I was your first penitent."

As a matter of fact confessions are very seldom accidentally betrayed in that manner; but people imagine they are, and that is enough to make general professional talk give a sense of insecurity.—London Spectator.

NOT FOR HER.

The Only Trouble Was That He Loved Too Well.

"Mine is no common love." It was evening in the Twilling mansion, says Harper's Bazar, and in the parlor the flickering rays from the suppressed gas jet but half revealed the outlines of two forms on the sofa, one of them that of a fair young girl, who, with head bent down, and with her wondrous dark eyes fixed upon the floor, was listening intently to the impassioned utterance of the young man at her side.

"No, Mildred," he continued, "when I first attempted to convey to you in my feeble and imperfect way the depth of this great love, which, like a flood, had crept into every crevice of my heart and filled it to its uttermost, I could not at that time realize how deep, how lasting it was to be. But now a full sense of its permanence, its power, its lasting quality, has been revealed to me, and I rejoice that I can say to you, ere we have taken the final and irrevocable step, that you need have no fear of the quality of the passion which I feel for the one being who is and ever will be the dearest and best in the world to me. And so, my darling, I repeat to you that mine is no common love. Well do I know what the love of the average man is. At first a fierce flame, it gradually goes lower and lower, perhaps dying out altogether. Absorbed in his ambitions, more and more occupied with the thought of getting wealth, of adding little by little to his income, he loses sight of the sweetest sentiments of life; he forgets the trifling endearments that mean so much to a woman. But with me all this is different. Day by day my love will grow stronger. No matter where I am, the thought of you will always be uppermost in my mind. I shall be with you as much as I can, and when I am away during my hours of toil your face shall ever be before me, effacing all other impressions."

"Are you sure," she murmured, half doubtfully—"are you sure, dear, that this will be so? Will you always consider your love before your business?"

"Always," he replied, his face undaunted, his rich voice betraying no tone of uncertainty—"always, my darling."

The girl at his side rose swiftly from her seat, and as she mechanically moved toward the chandelier and turned on the gas to its full height, she replied:

"Then I'm afraid, George, that you won't do. The man I marry has got to double his income every other year."

Very Remarkable.

Titt—You'll take part in the football game, I suppose, Mr. Tatt?

Tatt—Very sorry, but I don't know anything about the game.

"Why, I thought you had taken a full college course?"

"So I have, but I went to college to study, merely."—Detroit Free Press.

We hear often of the patience of the camel, of its wonderful endurance. A camel travels at the rate of about four miles an hour. It can be made to go seven, but it can keep this pace for only two hours. If urged beyond that, the Asiatics, who "break their hearts," for a camel over-driven lies down and dies.

Hopkinsville's Young Authors.

The little book of stories by Miss Florence Frances Brasher, which was recently put on the market here, is spoken of in words of high commendation by all who have read it. There are three stories, "In a Day of Darkness," "Where Deep Waters Flowed," and "A Bitter Lesson." The two first are novellas of fifty or more pages, the last a short story. They are all written in a charming style, entirely free from affectation and bombast, common errors that young authors fall into. Her descriptions are well executed and not overdone. Her characters well drawn and the plots admirably developed. On the whole the stories are interesting in their subject matter, pure in conception and delineated in well chosen words. We regard the young author as a girl of unusual talent—for she is still little more than a child—and the people of Hopkinsville, when they consider that she is dependent upon her pen for a livelihood, should encourage and aid her by helping her to dispose of the entire edition of her meritorious little book. It sells at 50¢ at the book stores, or may be ordered by mail.

Speaking of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fiasco, it is said that John L. Sullivan is thoroughly disgusted. Shake, John, shake.

The earnings of the Louisville and Nashville railroad for the fourth week of October and for the month make a very favorable showing. For the fourth week the total gross earnings were $337,893, an increase of $42,

110 over the corresponding period last year. For the month of October the earnings were $1,562,255, an increase of $87,100 compared with October, in 1896, when the earnings were the

According to the latest figures, the Republicans have 69 members of the Legislature, including one fusionist who is a Populist. This is one half of the General Assembly, there being 68 Democrats and one straight Populist.
The Republicans have a majority in the House and of course would not hesitate to unseat Democrats enough to give them the two or three votes needed to cause accidents in the election of a Senator. This precaution, however, will not be necessary. Senator Blackburn will be the caucus unionist and there are some Democrats who are Republicans on the financial question who could not be relied upon for a straight out Democratic ticket Blackburn.

Important to Teachers.

A circular letter from State Superintendent Thompson received this morning states that no check could be sent for the November draft of the school fund—the third month's salary
—which is due the teachers to-day.
He thinks, however, that part of the amount due can be sent Nov. 11th,
which will enable me to make a partial payment to the teachers next Saturday, Nov. 16th. Forty percent of the school fund has been sent so that all teachers who have not already done so, can draw their salary for the first two months.

I am very sorry of this delay in sending the money, and regret that I was not notified in time to save the teachers disappointment and inconvenience arising therefrom. The incident in the extension of time by the new law for the payment of taxes bids me assure the teachers that it can be done in their interest being done, and he hopes the State treasurer will soon be able to pay in full.
Very truly,
KATIE Mc DANIEL, Co. Supt.

After the Office.

There are already two active candidates for the position of Steward of the Asylum, although Mr. J. C. Buckner's commission does not expire until April 1897. They are Mr. J. P.
Fogers, of the Banner, and Mr. J. W.
Wicks, and both are proceeding
upon the idea that Gov. Bradley will make an early move against all Democrats found in appointive offices.
Both have been prominent and active Republicans and they will press
their respective claims in an ever growing manner.
